

*Online communication

These days, the Internet has become more popular and has made communication more convenient. An *online lesson is one example. Students can take online lessons even when they are not in school. Also, they can talk with people in other countries. For example, students in Japan are able to enjoy the conversations with students in Australia. *Online communication is a way to make friends and share ideas with people in other countries. However, some people say that they can't build up their friendship *online. They think making friends is easier when you can meet people. So, *online communication has both good and bad points.

[語注] *online オンラインの、インターネット上の

“Good morning. May I have your name, please? How are you?”

“Is this volume OK?”

“OK. Let's start the test. Your card is on your desk. Please take it and turn it over.”

(黙読) “Now, please read the passage on the card silently for one minute.”

(音読) “Now, please read it aloud.”

(英問英答) “Thank you. Now, I'll ask you three questions.”

1) According to the passage, what is one good point of online communication?

“Now, please turn over your card and put it down.”

2) Do you want to take an online lesson?

Yes - Why?

No - Why not?

3) If you have new classmates from foreign countries, what would you like to do for them?